

The Marine Institute has countless resources available for students and families alike. One of these being the Journal of Ocean Technology, a quarterly publication of the Marine Institute. We are delighted to offer a complimentary subscription to parents and families this year.

In each issue, you'll find themed essays, short articles, and peer reviewed technical papers that provide a window into the important issues, technologies, and innovations taking place in a range of ocean sectors – all in an easy-to-read format with high-resolution graphics and photography.

You'll find this subscription of great benefit for researching or completing technical reports or just for general interest about your student's area of study!
